

5 Customer Engagement Trends for 2025

The Next Wave of Customer Interaction: From Push to Pull

Customers are increasingly moving away from being "pushed" information to "pulling" it using Al-based prompts as and when they want it and on the channel that's most convenient to them.

Balanced Approach to Personalization

Personalization is effective only when it is meaningful and honest for the customers, and is rooted in the principles of data privacy, disclosures, and user consent.

Martech's Evolution: From a Fixed Tech Stack to a "Living Cartography"

Businesses are starting to gradually move away from the fixed tech stack approach to a "living cartography" of interconnected systems and technologies.

Al Agents: The Next Use Case of Al

Assistants, co-pilots, agents, concierge - no matter the name given to them, Al-powered digital/virtual assistants will create new opportunities and tactics for businesses to engage and interact with their customers/users.

Customer Retention to Overtake Acquisition as a Strategic Priority

As customer priorities change during times of economic and geopolitical uncertainties, businesses will amp up their customer retention and loyalty programs to retain their existing customers.

For a deep dive into the top five trends, the associated sub-trends, and what they mean for businesses and marketers, download our eBook The Customer Engagement Crystal Ball: Top Trends to Watch Out for in 2025.